Ulaanbaatar – Capital of Mongolia

Covering an area of 1,359 square km, it is home to approximately 1.7 million people—about half of the country's total population. It is a vast city on the steppe where modern high-rise buildings and factories coexist with traditional nomadic dwellings known as gers. It is truly the political and economic center of Mongolia, and a major transit point on the international railway that runs from China to Russia. Viewed from the sky, it appears as though the city is floating above the grasslands. Ulaanbaatar is full of attractions such as Chinggis Khan Square and Zaisan Hill, making it a vibrant city rich in daily life and local culture.

Khongor Sand Dunes

Khongor Sand Dunes – The Jewel of the Southern Gobi
Stretching across Mongolia's southern Gobi Desert, the Khongor Sand Dunes suddenly appear after driving nearly 200 km through stony desert and low shrubs. Towering over 50 meters high and resembling golden mountains, these dunes are an awe-inspiring sight.

What makes this area truly unique is the blend of sand and steppe — grassy fields, small shrubs, and even a gentle stream run along the base of the dunes. Visitors often spot camels trekking gracefully with travelers across the sands.

Known as Mongolia's No.1 sand dunes, Khongor offers an unforgettable desert experience with breathtaking views and a touch of nomadic life.

Bayanzag

Bayanzag is famous worldwide for the discovery of dinosaur eggs and fossils. This area was first introduced to the world in the 1920s by American explorer Roy Chapman Andrews. He uncovered several dinosaur fossils and eggs here, which are now displayed in one of America's largest museums.

Additionally, Bayanzag is well-known for rare findings that suggest humans may have lived in this region millions of years ago, making it a fascinating historical and paleontological site.

Tsagaan Suvarga (White Stupa)

The Tsagaan Suvarga (White Stupa) slopes are located to the southwest of Del Mountain in Urtj County. This steep slope, formed over millions of years as an ancient seabed, is characterized by sedimentary rock formations. The slope faces east toward the sun and, from a distance, resembles the ruins of an ancient city — an interesting and unique sight.

The landscape here rises over 60 meters at its highest point and stretches impressively for 400 meters. The "stupa" stands at a 90-degree angle, reaching into the sky. After heavy rains, the fast-flowing streams beneath the stupa resemble a giant waterfall, creating an awe-inspiring scene.

Ikh Gazriin Chuluu

The area of Ikh Gazriin Chuluu has origins in the Permian and Cretaceous periods and is made up of complex rock cliffs formed from granite, porphyritic rock, and diorite. Located at an altitude of 1,565 to 1,709 meters, it covers 600 square kilometers, stretching 30 km in length and 15 km in width. This region is home to over 40 caves, including the famous Tagtarny Baast (also known as "Horse Droppings Cave"), which measures 30 meters in length, 3.5 meters in width, and 10 meters in height. Ikh Gazriin Chuluu is also a habitat for more than 20 animal species, including marmots, foxes, black insects, eagles, birch trees, and the rare Cossack Gerbil.

Terelj National Park

Located 80 kilometers northeast of Ulaanbaatar, Terelj National Park sits at an altitude of 1,600 meters, making it ideal for hiking, horseback riding, and rock climbing. The landscape bears a resemblance to the Alps. Protected as a national park since the 1960s, it officially became a national park in 1994. The park is home to over 250 species of birds, as well as protected animals such as elk and bears. It is the closest tourist destination to Ulaanbaatar.

Elsen Tasarkhai

Burd, with its rich Mongolian grasslands and a wide variety of flowers, is the gateway to tourism. Nomads have long worshiped Mt. Khugnu Khan, which is located in the northern part of Burd, but now it is protected as a "protected area" and there are rare flora and fauna. Near this area, there are only dunes in Burd. The fine-grained sand dunes have beautiful wind patterns drawn by the wind. Locally known as Elsen Tasarkhai, the beautiful contrast between grasslands and dunes is also a popular travel landscape.

Lake Khuvsgul

Often referred to as the "Switzerland of Mongolia" by foreign tourists, Khuvsgul Province is home to Lake Khuvsgul, the deepest lake in Central Asia and the largest in Mongolia. Known as the "Blue Pearl of Mongolia," it is one of the country's most beautiful and pristine natural resort areas.

The region is also near the home of the Tsaatan people, an ethnic minority of reindeer herders who practice a traditional nomadic lifestyle.

Genghis Khan Statue & 13th Century Village

Located 54 km east of Ulaanbaatar, the Genghis Khan Statue is the world's largest equestrian statue at 46 meters tall. Visitors can climb to the top of the statue for panoramic views of the surrounding landscape.

Nearby is the 13th Century Village, where you can experience life during the Mongol Empire. Each camp represents different aspects of ancient nomadic culture — including tasting traditional dairy products and seeing your name written in old Mongolian script.

Tsenkher Hot Springs

is a natural hot spring known for its beautiful surroundings — rivers full of fish, volcanic lakes, forests, and grazing yaks.

The spring water reaches temperatures of 83.5°C and contains hydrogen sulfide. It offers both indoor and outdoor baths. Soaking under a sky full of stars creates an unforgettable experience — weather permitting. Nestled in vast rolling hills, this wild, open-air hot spring is one of Mongolia's hidden gems.

Steppe Nomads Camp

Located about 130 km east of Ulaanbaatar (a 2-hour drive), and just 110 km from the new Chinggis Khaan International Airport. After 113 km of paved road, you'll drive 17 km across untouched steppe.

Surrounded by endless grasslands, hills, rivers, horses, and traditional gers, it's the perfect place to experience the true essence of Mongolia. Despite its closeness to the capital, the peaceful and wide-open landscape feels like a world away.

Western Mongolia – Kazakh Ethnic Group

Located near the UNESCO World Heritage-listed Lake Uvs (in Uvs Province), Bayan-Ulgii shares borders with China and Kazakhstan. The Kazakh ethnic group predominantly resides here. It's about a 2.5-hour domestic flight from Ulaanbaatar.

The official language in Bayan-Ulgii is Kazakh, not Mongolian, and the primary religion is Islam. Known for its high, rugged mountains, the region attracts many European climbers in the summer. The people of Bayan-Ulgii maintain a traditional lifestyle, with most continuing the age-old art of falconry.

Yolin Am Canyon

Located in the Gobi Gurvansaikhan Mountains, Yolin Am (meaning "Eagle Canyon" in Mongolian) is a beautiful and serene place. True to its name, eagles can often be seen soaring above the canyon. With an elevation of 2,200 meters, the area remains covered in snow during early summer, although the snow melts by midsummer. Despite the heat of summer, the canyon floor remains cool and refreshing.

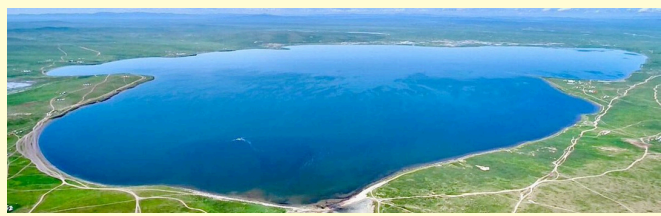

Walking on the ice between the canyon's walls on a hot summer day offers a unique experience. The canyon is also home to a variety of wildlife, including wild sheep, mountain goats, wolves, Gobi bears, vultures, and wild donkeys.

Ugii Lake

Located about 120 kilometers from Tsenkher Hot Springs, Ugii Lake is situated in Ugii Village, Arkhangai Province. The lake is home to 170 species of birds and around 20 species of fish. It is designated as a Ramsar Wetland, which helps protect important habitats for species such as pike, lenok, swans, and cranes. Every year, many migratory birds, including whooper swans, Eurasian cranes, and red-crowned cranes, make their stop here.

Ugi Lake is one of the largest lakes in Mongolia. Visitors can enjoy activities like bird watching, hiking, fishing, and even taking boat tours around the lake.

Baga Gazryn chuluu

Surrounding the mountain paths and valleys, there are many springs, as well as numerous ancient tombs, kurgans, rock paintings, and monuments. Notable tourist spots include Ger Chuluu, Sudutyn Am, Jargalant Cave, the Fountain of Vision, and the popular rock formations known as Takhiliin Khaytsal.

The highest point of the mountain reaches about 1700 meters, requiring proper mountain preparation to climb. Apart from the sculptures, the site is rich in rectangular tombs and hieroglyphic inscriptions.

OVERVIEW OF MONGOLIA

Best Travel Seasons

- Spring (March to May): This is the most challenging season of the year. Snow turns into rain, and the thawed ground can make the days feel colder than winter. Strong winds mixed with dust are common, and dust storms and whirlwinds frequently occur. The weather is unpredictable, often said to have "four seasons in a single day," so it's important to prepare for both heat and cold.
- Summer (June to August): Summer is the best time if you want to visit the green grasslands. In Mongolia's continental climate, the temperature difference between day and night is extreme, and after rainfall, temperatures can drop sharply even during the day. Be prepared for these sudden changes.
- Autumn (September to October): As the days pass, the temperature drops, and the grasslands turn into a golden sea. This season, called the "Golden Autumn" in Mongolia, signifies the harvest period. The grasslands become busy with preparations for the approaching winter, including the slaughtering of sheep for dried meat. During this time, mornings and evenings become quite cold, and by mid-September, temperatures can drop below freezing.
- Winter (November to February): By November, temperatures drop below freezing. When you exhale, the moisture in your breath freezes on your eyelashes, and the cold can be painful to the skin. During the coldest months, January and February, temperatures in Ulaanbaatar can drop to nearly -30°C.

South Gobi / Gobi Desert

When it comes to the Gobi Desert, people who are unfamiliar with it often imagine a barren desert, like the Sahara, where not a single blade of grass grows. However, the Mongolian Gobi is actually composed of various types of terrain. "South Gobi" in Mongolian means land with sparse, short grass. While the image of a desolate desert with no vegetation may come to mind, in reality, this accounts for only about 25% of the country's land area. In this area, camel herding is most commonly seen.

Frequently asked questions

Local Tour Highlights in Mongolia

Passport & Visa?

Travelers to Mongolia will obtain a visa to enter Mongolia from their home country.

"Are there things I should prepare before traveling to Mongolia? Especially regarding clothing. ..."

"Mongolia has extreme temperature differences, so please be prepared to dress in layers. You won't be able to protect yourself from the cold without proper outerwear. We will also provide guidance, but during winter, please make sure to bring proper winter gear."

"Spring (March to May)"

In Mongolia, even on sunny spring days, daytime temperatures often only reach around 0°C (32°F). After sunset, the temperature can drop below -10°C (14°F).

Basically, you will need winter clothing similar to what you would wear in your country during the winter. Gloves, scarves, and disposable heating pads (kairo) are especially useful.

Please prepare adequate cold-weather gear, such as down jackets or thick coats, along with warm layers like fleece or heavy sweatshirts.

Summer (June to September)

During summer in Mongolia, daytime temperatures on sunny days can reach as high as 30°C to nearly 40°C (86°F to 104°F). However, after sunset, the temperature drops quickly, and mornings and evenings can get as cool as around 10°C (50°F), even in summer. However, we recommend bringing at least one windproof outer layer, such as a jumper or windbreaker, and a warm item like a fleece or thick sweatshirt for the cooler times of day.

About Luggage...

We recommend using a suitcase with a lock for your belongings.

In Mongolia, the local currency is the Tugrik (Tg).

A daily budget of around $25 to $50 USD should be sufficient for most travel expenses.

About Credit Cards

Some credit card companies are accepted in Mongolia. In Ulaanbaatar, many hotels and stores that display credit card logos do accept cards. You can also exchange any leftover currency back into dollars at the airport.

Things You Should Bring...

- Mosquito Repellent (Mosquitoes and insects are common in the grasslands.)
- Medications (Stomach medicine, diarrhea medicine, fever medicine, and motion sickness tablets.)
- Flashlight (Useful for going outside when staying at camps.)
- Sunscreen and Sunglasses (UV rays can be strong even without sunlight.)
- Wet Wipes (Convenient for use during bus travel.)
- Simple Seasonings (Useful if the food tastes a bit bland.)
- Hand Cream and Lip Balm (The air is dry, unlike in Japan.)
- Candy or Chocolate (Giving these to children and elderly people when visiting nomadic yurts is appreciated.)

This is my first time in Mongolia. Is it safe for a woman to travel alone?

"Of course, it is absolutely fine. In fact, we have many female solo travelers joining our tours. Recently, this has become more common. If you're feeling uncertain, we can also arrange for a local guide to assist you, so please feel free to contact us for any concerns."
